Highlights This Week

Book Review Club

Are you reading a book you just can't put down (fiction or nonfiction)? Come describe it tomorrow at 10 to other bibliophiles, and hear about their favorite books. This "book club" is fun because there is never a book assignment to read prior to meetings. And you'll get some good new book recommendations!

The Perfect Mt. Tam Hike

Thursday, June 3

6 1/3 miles with moderate grades

Join hike leader Jackie Kudler for a wonderful loop high on Mt. Tam, highlighted by grand vistas of the Bay, the Pacific and the green hills. A chance to hunt for wildflowers!

Meet at 10 AM at the Pan Toll parking lot.

Plan for a 6 1/3 mile hike through all of Tam's special environments.

This should take approximately 3 hours.

Contact Jackie at j77prospect@sbcglobal.net to RSVP and for carpool.

If you think you only will join us for part of the loop, bring your own wheels, so you can turn back whenever you choose.

That's how many miles long the world's largest iceberg, which just broke off from Antarctica, measures. It's about 15.5 miles wide, giving the whole thing an area close to 80 times the size of Manhattan.

Fire-smart Landscaping

Here's a UC Marin Master Gardener fire-smart landscaping tip for June.

It's time to clean-up and spruce up. By eliminating or moving combustible items surrounding your home, you can take the first step towards making your landscape fire-smart. Grab a bucket, a broom and a hand pruner and start these easy-to-do maintenance tasks today:

- Clean-up areas where wind eddies deposit leaf and plant litter along the perimeter of your home.
- Clear dead debris from flower beds close to the home.
- Rake up wood mulch within 5 feet of the home and move it to another location in your garden.
- Trim dead, damaged and diseased branches and dispose of the material in your green waste bin.
- Move common combustible fire hazards away from the area immediately surrounding your home including brooms, rakes, plastic waste bins, wood furniture, furniture cushions, wood piles, and natural fiber door mats. Move these items as far away from your house as possible – or indoors if a nearby wildfire threatens.

Ducks on Parade

Every spring, the students of Eisenhower Elementary in Hopkins, Minnesota get an adorable surprise when a mother duck sets up her home in the school's courtyard and hatches a bevy of tiny, tittering ducklings. This tradition has been going on for twenty years now, from one mother mallard to the next, and is so beloved that a pair of parents from the school recently wrote and illustrated a children's book about it. For the students, the best part is when the ducklings parade from the courtyard through the school's halls to a pond beyond the
