Although Marin is ranked purple for now, the California Department of Public Health has confirmed Marin will move into the second – or “red” – tier in an abbreviated timeline due in part to Marin County Public Health’s high testing rates, and assuming Marin’s case rate remains stable.

Marin’s “purple” Tier 1 status means the county can reopen indoor shopping centers at maximum 25% capacity, and hair salons and barbershops indoors, beginning August 31. Those businesses will be held to the same public health

No.16 Preservation

After nearly 100 years of welcoming guests to the Legion of Honor, Anna Vaughn Hyatt Huntington's Joan of Arc needed extensive restoration.

The French heroine's sword, which had detached in 2017, required a sturdy replacement. The original protective coating and patina of the life-size statue had degraded as well, resulting in an uneven and unprotected exterior. In collaboration with New York City's Citywide Conservation Program, our conservation team began the intricate restoration process, surrounding Joan of Arc with a cocoon of scaffolding as specialists used heat and acid to refinish her exterior.

This newsletter issue brings together multiple perspectives on preservation, from the conservation of art to the legacies we memorialize and those challenging how history gets written.

Jane Williams, director of conservation, shows you step-by-step the sophisticated methods used to restore Anna Vaughn Hyatt Huntington's Joan of Arc statue.

10 Adventures You Can Only Have in the U.S.

America is big. Very big. It's big even before you account for its snowy Alaskan and tropical Hawaiian outposts. The sunny surf beaches along California give way to dusty deserts, snow-capped peaks and endless forests that reach across to the gritty East Coast cities of New York and Boston. There are distinctly American adventures to be had in all four corners of this vast land. So
