An Intergenerational, Multiracial, Virtual Friendship Formed in COVID-19

The story of one 65-year-old and his new Gen Z friend

This rope bridge is helping to save the world's rarest primate

A critically-endangered gibbon species in China has been thrown a lifeline – literally – with the creation of a simple rope bridge across a 15-metre gap in the forest.

Conservationists created the wildlife crossing – known as an artificial canopy bridge – on China's Hainan Island after it was hit, in 2014, by Typhoon Rammasun, the strongest typhoon to make landfall in mainland China since 1949. The storm caused landslides that carved gaps of up to 30 metres wide through the forest, destroying the highway of treetops that the gibbons swing through.

The Hainan gibbon is the rarest primate species on Earth and is endemic to China's Hainan Island. Only around 30 individuals remain, all living in Hainan Bawangling National Nature Reserve.

Artist Decorates the Beach With Mesmerizing Arrangements of Rocks

UK-based artist Jon Foreman continues to adorn picturesque landscapes with mesmerizing arrangements of colorful rocks. His land art ranges from tight spirals to half-moons to abstract designs that make mesmerizing patterns on smooth sandy beaches. Although each one is ultimately swept away by the tide and other natural elements, the ephemerality of the installations is a key part of Foreman's creative process.
